

over the last decade. To combat the growing pollution problem, some governments have put new policies in place. In the article, "On Top of The World," published in E Magazine in September 1999, "...local governments in some popular destinations have...out."

Works Cited

"On Top of The World:Cleaning Up a Legacy Of High-Altitude Trash." E Magazine September/October 1999: 14-5. SIRS. Web. 13 March 2012.

...some governments have made it more difficult to get climbing permits and have even established new fees ("On").

Mar 14-10:07 AM

Conservation keeps Everest beautiful, and it keeps the local economy intact. Many guides take personal responsibility for the mountain's beauty. "In 1990, Rob Hall and Gary Ball spearheaded an effort that removed five tons of garbage from Base Camp" (Krakauer 64).

Mar 14-10:33 AM