

Appositive, allusion, appeals to ethos and
logos and pathos

-“Chris S., ACLU guy”
By alluding to Chris S., the author builds credibility for his argument.
-Implies that the feds are violating our civil liberties.
-Continue the appeal to fear w/
the idea that the gvt. Is infringing on our rights.

Allusion to Greek mythology

“Pandora’s Box”
-If the software is created, then chaos will ensue.
-Many scary and unexpected possibilities
-Global implications
-do more harm than good

Weighted hypotheticals
(if, then)

“legal precedents”
-hypothesis favors his stance
-create doubt
-create fear
-shake our trust in the gvt.
-question the real motives

Metaphor	-“a cure that is worse than the disease.” -unlocking the phone will have negative effects no matter what -this will be worse than what we have right now -a disease can be spread -all humans can be injured -fixing this tiny issue will create a bigger issue -medical metaphor – there’s a sickness in the world
Repetition of the idea	“we don’t have it” -emphasizes the lack of having the software b/c this software is just too dangerous -bringing this into the world would be devastating
Appeal to fear/metaphor	“hand in glove” -frighten people into thinking that phone companies are allied with the gvt. -business doing the gvt.’s dirty work
Understatement	“...bend Apple to its will”

Appeal to logic Allusion	The government is being too forceful, overstepping its authority -“spying on spouses” -Statistics and anecdotes “Pandora’s Box” -all hell will break loose and there will be no return to normality -global harm
--	---

Allusion	“Pandora’s Box” <ul style="list-style-type: none"> -horrible things will come out -there’s no going back -it will make an already bad situation more complicated -global issue/not affecting just the USA -bad guys using the code
Diction of disappointment	“sober” and “dedicated” and “sordid” <ul style="list-style-type: none"> -brings the ethics of the government into question -everything is not as clean as people would like to believe -a lot of shadiness goes on behind closed doors -appeal to fear -fear as a weapon
Passive voice, metaphor	“tables were turned” <ul style="list-style-type: none"> -the situation has changed; we don’t want to be like the Chinese phone maker -advantage/disadvantage -negative connotation -out of their hands
Juxtaposition/antithesis	“old fashioned police work/ cutting edge”

Diction of secrecy/metaphor

-need a balance

“backdoors”

-secrecy

-sketchy

-secondary, not the correct way or first way

-escape

Repetition of ideas	“something we simply do not have” -implies the gvt.’s request is unreasonable -a lot of work -could be a waste of time & resources -government is imposing -implies danger
Antithesis, juxtaposition, metaphor	“cure/disease” -makes the situation more real and more present -directly relates it to something bad -disease spreads when you don’t take care of it -two bad options
Allusion	“Pandora’s Box” -chaos! -If you open it, you’ll never be able to shut it again -can’t go back -this is a global issue
Appositive	“Tim Cook, CEO apple” -importance of person speaking -credibility -it’s a big deal
Rhetorical Question	“What might?”

metaphor	<ul style="list-style-type: none">-questioning the intelligence and capability of the FBI and government to do their jobs-presenting another option-causes pause-credibility <ul style="list-style-type: none">“Hand in glove”-creates uneasiness-China-appeal to fear-privacy
----------	--